SF Center for Economic Development Attends RSA Conference

The San Francisco Center for Economic Development (SFCED) team attended last week's RSA conference at the Moscone center, with the goal of connecting with international business leaders, startups, and entrepreneurs. They looked at cutting-edge cybersecurity solutions, new developments, and how San Francisco continues to be a key center for resilience and digital innovation.

Throughout the conference, the team connected with Bay Area businesses leading the way in cybersecurity innovation while also gaining valuable insights about the changing threat landscape from international policy experts and thought leaders. Most significantly, they had the opportunity to highlight San Francisco's distinctive advantages- from top-notch infrastructure and talent to a highly collaborative business environment- that make it the ideal place for expanding cybersecurity firms.

A big thank you to the RSAC staff for creating such a motivating and collaborative environment. The SFCED team is thrilled to keep fostering the expansion of the cybersecurity industry and elevating San Francisco to the status of a global hub for technology.
